COUNSEL

I have enclosed the front page of "The Lufkin Daily News" dated 4 August 2011, which clearly shows a billboard in opposition to President Obama. The billboard does not indicate who purchased or supports this political view of the President (Disclaimer, Public Communications). I believe that this billboard is a violation under the Federal Election Commission as it involves the President of the United States.

The billboard in the paper is located on the East side of Medford Drive/US 59/US 69 between Texas State Highway 103 East and State Farm to Market 325, in Lufkin, Texas. There is a second billboard located on the West side of US 59 South of Lufkin, between Lufkin, Texas and Diboll, Texas. Both billboards are carrying the same message.

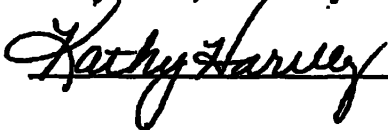

As the newspaper states, Mark Hicks owns both billboards and the individuals who purchased the space for six months wished to remain anonymous. The phone number for Mr. Hicks is 936-634-2040.

On the contrary, Lufkin leaders say city is a great place to live

By STEVE KNIGHT
Staff writer

In light of a Fort Worth newspaper columnist labeling Lufkin as "the diamond America," Mayor Jack Gordon stood up for his city Wednesday.

In Sunday's edition of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and available online, columnist Paul Kennedy wrote that Lufkin was now the share of America after a Lufkin man originally from Houston was convicted and sentenced to 30 days to jail in July for molesting a child in his home during a 2009 incident in which police mistook him for a burglar.

Gordon said it was unfortunate that because of an isolated incident, some people outside of the community have come down on the city without understanding what was going on.

"The police chief in this department has enough public confidence as any community in Texas based on their professionalism, training and their involvement in the community. In the last 10 years, the Lufkin Police Department has built themselves into a high integrity unit," Gordon said. "We have this whole thing of things other people are saying that Lufkin is a great place to live. Outdoor Life Magazine placed Lufkin as one of the top 100 places in the country to live. People outside of Lufkin have chosen this community as being a good place to live, work, move a business and raise a family."

Gordon also said Lufkin is the No. 1 metropolitan community in Texas and a hub for a population base approaching 400,000 in the sub-county region, leading in job, hotel sales and health care services.

Jerry Whitman, president of the Lufkin/Angelo County Chamber of Commerce, said Lufkin is a gemstone and giving constantly.

"This is an incredible, outstanding community. There's an incredible diversity of this community to do what they say they are going to do," Whitman said. "I've seen them so many times decide they want to do a project whether it's the County Exposition Center of the Elgin Trust Zoo or whatever, and within a matter of months, the money is raised and the project takes off. That's what this community is all about."

Anti-Obama billboards may violate ad guidelines

Owner of signs said people who paid for it wish to remain anonymous

By ANDREW SPENCER
Staff writer

A couple of anti-Obama billboards in Lufkin may be in violation of Texas Ethics Commission political advertising guidelines.

The message on the billboards, located on east Loop 287 just on U.S. Highway 69 north, reads "More taxes! More welfare! More government! Vote Obama out!" and is accompanied by a photo of President Barack Obama in a red circle with a slash through it.

According to the Texas Ethics Commission, any advertising that expresses political advocacy requires a disclosure statement that should include the words "political advertisement" or a reasonable abbreviation such as "pol. adv.," along with the full name of one of the persons who paid for the political advertising, the political committee authorizing the political advertising, or the candidate or specific-purpose committee supporting the candidate, if the political advertising is authorized by the candidate.

Political advertising as defined by the TEC, includes communications supporting or opposing a candidate for nomination or election to either a public office or an office of a political party, or other manipulations supporting or opposing an officeholder, a political party or a measure. In order to be considered a political advertisement, it must also appear on one of the media listed by the TEC regulations, which includes billboards.

Mark Hicks, the owner of the Lufkin billboards on which the anti-Obama ads are placed, said individuals paid for the billboards but wished to remain anonymous.

"They weren't working for a political candidate," Hicks said.

The boards went up around July 1, according to Hicks, and the individuals paid for them to remain for six months.

Bob Fleury, chair of the Angelo County Republican Party and Lufkin's former city attorney, questions whether the billboard is even really a political ad.

"I'm not offended that whoever said it doesn't have their name on it," he said. "I don't know that the disclosure was necessary."

Jim Work, chair of the Angelo County Democratic Party, said that because the billboard references Obama, the president, it should be subject to Federal Election Commission guidelines.

"Once it's the president, it doesn't fall under Texas guidelines, it falls under federal guidelines," Work said. "It should fall under the Federal Election Commission, who definitely states it needs a disclosure on it."

The Starville media relations person with the TEC, said that should a complaint be filed against the billboards, the person responsible for placing the advertisements could be fined up to $4,000.

"Up to an eight-member commission with the TEC would have to decide if the boards were political advertising," Spencel said. "A disclosure statement must say, 'Political advertising by...' followed by whoever paid for it."

While it has given school supply donations in the past, this year the Junior League teamed up with community partners, such as Buckner Children and Family Services, Angelo Pediatrics, The Children's Clinic and area dentists, to reach more needy families and make this year the biggest event yet, according to Hicks.

Anti-Obama billboards may violate ad guidelines

By AUDREY SPENCER/The Lufkin Daily News | Posted: Thursday, August 4, 2011 1:45 am

Editor's note: An earlier version of this story, which ran in today's newspaper, indicated that the billboards in question might be in violation of state laws, when in fact they are subject to federal laws.

A couple of anti-Obama billboards in Lufkin may be in violation of Federal Election Commission political advertising guidelines.

The message on the billboards, located on east Loop 287 and on U.S. Highway 59 north, reads "More taxes! More welfare! More government! Vote Obama out!" and is accompanied by a photo of President Barack Obama in a red circle with a slash through it.

Mark Hicks, the owner of the Lufkin billboards on which the anti-Obama ads are placed, said individuals paid for the billboards but wished to remain anonymous.

"They weren't working for a political candidate," Hicks said.

The boards went up around July 1, according to Hicks, and the individuals paid for them to remain for six months.

Bob Flozney, chair of the Angelina County Republican Party and Lufkin's former city attorney, questions whether the billboard is even really a political ad.

"I'm not offended that whoever said it doesn't have their name on it," he said. "I don't know that the disclaimer was necessary."

Jim Wark, chair of the Angelina County Democratic Party, said that because the billboard references Obama, the president, it should be subject to Federal Election Commission guidelines.

"Since it's the president, it doesn't fall under Texas guidelines, it falls under federal guidelines," Wark said. "It should fall under the Federal Election Commission, who definitely states it needs a disclaimer on it."

Mary Beaudenberger, Public Affairs Specialist with the FEC, stated in an email that, "A disclaimer must appear on any public communication by any person that expressly advocates the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate or solicits funds in connection with a federal election."

FEC guidelines state that "All public communications... by any person that expressly advocate the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate" must include a disclaimer, which "If the communication, including any solicitation, is not authorized by a candidate, authorized committee of a candidate, or an agent of either of the foregoing, the disclaimer must clearly state the full name and permanent street address, telephone number or World Wide Web address of the person who paid for the communication, and that the communication is not authorized by any candidate or candidate's committee.

The FEC Code of Federal Regulations can be read at edocket.access.gpo.gov/cfr_2011/janqtr/11cfr110.11.htm. More information about federal political advertising can be found at fec.gov.
