SUPPLEMENTAL
RESPONSE TO SUBPOENA

The National Right to Work Committee (NRTWC), hereby submits this Supplemental Response to the Subpoena to Produce Documents/Order to Submit Written Answers served upon NRTWC in the above-referenced MUR, following the June 10, 1997, decision of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia in Misc. Action No. 97-0160, ordering NRTWC to respond to Interrogatory No. 3 and Document Request No. 3, as modified by the Court.

INTRODUCTORY COMMENTS

Interrogatory No. 3 and Document Request No. 3 relate to activities from more than four years ago. NRTWC has experienced changes in personnel over those years, and documents may no longer exist, if they ever existed. Nonetheless, NRTWC, with the assistance of counsel and staff, has conducted a diligent search for documents and facts, and responds on the basis of information so gathered.

The Court limited the scope of Interrogatory No. 3 and Document Request No. 3 to the 1992 senatorial candidates, and the Commission, by its attorneys in discussions with NRTWC counsel, has further limited the scope to the 1992 general election senatorial candidates. Thus, NRTWC's search has focused on the 1992 general election senatorial candidates.

Also, the Commission and NRTWC, in briefing and in discussions between counsel, have agreed that NRTWC may redact documents to delete supporter-identifying information from documents to be produced, and NRTWC is doing so.

INTERROGATORY NO. 3

NRTWC did not engage in, or finance, in whole or in part, "any activities relating to federal elections in October-December 1992 . . .," if by "relating to" the Commission means making contributions to candidates or "independent expenditures," or engaging in "express advocacy" communications as enunciated by the U.S. Supreme Court in Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1 (1976) and FEC v. Massachusetts Citizens for Life (MCFL), 479 U.S. 238 (1986).

NRTWC did engage in "issue discussion" activities in October-December 1992, as enunciated in Buckley and MCFL, which contained the names of 1992 general election senatorial candidates. These activities constituted "issue discussion" communications of various forms, including press communications and advertisements (NRTWC's accounting department 2); newsletters (NRTWC's accounting department 21); action/fund-raising communications (NRTWC's accounting departments 9, 17, and 20). NRTWC's accounting departments 23, 24, and 28 provided supporting services for other departments shown during October and November. The candidates' names are shown on the materials themselves, which are being produced under Document Request No. 3.

This many years after the date(s) of the activities, it would be difficult if not impossible to particularize expenses on a project-by-project basis. However, NRTWC is able to, and is, providing the attached accounting schedules showing the costs of the departments involved (2, 9, 17, 20, 21, 23, 24, and 28) for the months in which they each conducted or supported issue discussion activities during the period October-December 1992, except that NRTWC has not been able to locate a detail schedule for November 1992, and the total costs for November have been computed from the October, December, and year-to-date 1992 costs. Only personnel and advertising costs of department 2 were related to the activities in question and have been included in the totals. Even with this adjustment, costs for all the departments involved are overstated because they include costs for activities other than those being reported on here, but that is the best NRTWC can do at this time.

Certain costs attributable to the activities are of a general allocable nature, such as salaries, wages, benefits, rent, etc., which cannot be further particularized. Other costs are of a direct nature, such as the cost of printing a mail package or placing an advertisement, which, if the records existed, might be further particularized, but such records have not yet been found.

In general, direct cost activities should have been paid for with general operations checks, copies of which should be in long-term storage. Those check copies may have backup information attached, e.g., invoices, which might permit some direct costs to be further particularized. Project cost documents may also be in long-term storage. However, it would take significantly more time and effort to research NRTWC's long-term storage to determine whether backup documentation or project cost documents do, in fact, exist which would enable NRTWC to particularize expenses on a project-by-project basis. NRTWC is willing to discuss this further with the Commission after this Supplemental Response and accompanying documents have been reviewed by the Commission and the Commission has been able to determine whether that additional research is necessary.

DOCUMENT REQUEST NO. 3

There are no documents relating to or referencing "any activities relating to federal elections in October-December 1992 . . .," if by "relating to" the Commission means making contributions to candidates or "independent expenditures," or engaging in "express advocacy" communications as enunciated by the U.S. Supreme Court in Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1 (1976) and FEC v. Massachusetts Citizens for Life (MCFL), 479 U.S. 238 (1986).

There are documents relating to or referencing "issue discussion" activities in October-December 1992, as enunciated in Buckley and MCFL, which contained the names of 1992 general election senatorial candidates, and those documents are being produced. They are labeled by the accounting department to which they relate, which corresponds with the accounting schedules being produced to show the costs of the activities, albeit overstated, as explained in the response to Interrogatory No. 3, above.

The hard drive in one employee's stand-alone computer, which may have contained documents responsive to the subpoena, was destroyed recently by natural causes, a series of power surges from an unknown origin. The hard drive has been inspected by a computer repair company, which has reported that the hard drive is totally destroyed and no data is retrievable.

As for newsletters, those for October, November and December 1992 are being produced in final hard copy version. In addition, some draft versions of the stories have been retrieved from an IBM-type computer, and are being produced on computer disk. NRTWC does not believe there are any other computerized copies on its MacIntosh-type computer used to prepare final versions with graphics; however, four 1992 text documents have been identified, but software available to NRTWC at this time is unable to access those documents to determine what they are or what they contain. NRTWC is willing to discuss this further with the Commission after this Supplemental Response and the accompanying documents have been reviewed by the Commission and the Commission has been able to determine whether the Mac versions of the newsletters are necessary.

Some documents reflecting 1992 dates earlier than the October-December period are being produced because there is a likelihood that they were distributed, to some degree, during the October-December period.

See also, the response to Interrogatory No. 3, which is adopted here.

Respectfully submitted,

The National Right to Work Committee

Confidential Memorandum

December 2, 1992

To: Board of Directors Executive Committee
From: Martin Fox, Director of Public Affairs
RE: Activities of Committee Public Affairs Department

During the last three months, the Committee's Public Affairs department oversaw several successful media programs. They include:

1) Support for Committee's Federal Survey and Citizen Alert Programs

Beginning over a year ago, the Committee began preparing its federal Survey '92 program, which attempts to find out where all federal candidates stand on Right to Work issues. Side-by-side with that effort, the Committee alerts its members, so they can contact the candidates to encourage them to reject compulsory unionism and publicly embrace Right to Work.

When appropriate, the Committee's Public Affairs staff will encourage news media scrutiny on the candidates.

Most of the time, we choose not to seek media coverage, which would help mobilize our opponents as well as Right to Work supporters. But sometimes it is appropriate, and sometimes our mailings spur reporters and editors to grill candidates on Right to Work.

When that happens, the Committee gladly and expertly documents for journalists the complicity of many politicians with forced unionism. We did that not only with print journalists, but also with radio stations as well (see attachments 1-10).

2) Exposing Bill Clinton's (and other union-label politicians') support for compulsory unionism

In October, at the tail end of the Committee's federal Survey '92 and Citizen Alert programs, the Public Affairs staff prepared and placed newspaper display ads in five states.

These ads focused attention on the refusal of Bill Clinton and five Senate candidates to support Right to Work. Instead, each one had embraced compulsory unionism, and the ads (see attachments 11-15) supported the Committee's mail efforts to turn up the heat on candidates so they would embrace Right to Work.

As a result of the combined Survey and Citizen Action program, in five states receiving special attention, the newly elected Senator had yielded to the desires of his constituents, and pledged to support Right to Work 100%.

2004-04-23 14:00

The value of the Committee's display ads was to enhance the credibility (and thus the effectiveness) of the Committee's programs, both with its members, who might not otherwise perceive their extent, and with the media and the general public.

The Committee also prepared ads for use in the other 16 Right to Work states which focused solely on Bill Clinton's embrace of forced unionism (see attachments 16 and 17).

3) Exposing Big Labor's Extensive (and mostly illegal) Political Empire

The 1992 campaign provided a unique opportunity to expose Big Labor's $400 million secret -- its massive, mostly illegal "soft" money political machine.

Using workers' forced dues, union chiefs buy themselves immense political leverage. Forced-dues pay for such things as producing and distributing political literature, operating phone banks to solicit votes and then get 'em out to vote on Election Day, and "nonpartisan" voter-registration drives, among other things.

A big chunk of "soft" money comes in the loan of salaried union staffers to work full-time for favored candidates. These paid "volunteers" provide invaluable campaign support -- often they fill high-level campaign positions, sometimes even managing or raising funds for the candidate's campaign.

The Committee's Public Affairs staff used a variety of methods to draw attention to this massive war chest:

- * The Committee's monthly Newsletter repeatedly reported on Big Labor's "soft" money expenditures (see attachments 18-21). Much of this showed up later in other news reports (see attachments 22 and 23).
- * The Public Affairs department provided materials to two publications, Education Week and Insight magazine, which in turn prepared extensive articles about Big Labor's illegal, "soft" money empire (see attachments 24 and 25).
- * When the Senate tried to cut all funding for the Bush Administration's modest steps to curtail illegal forced-dues politics, the Committee swung into action.
- * Federal Legislation discovered the sneak attack on the Supreme Court's Beck decision, and the Public Affairs department reported it to the nation's media (see attachments 26 and 27).

4) Shaping Election-related News Coverage

The Committee informed TV, radio and print journalists how Big Labor's political machine was toiling to buy the 1992 elections, and described what the National Right to Work Committee was doing and would do to counteract Big Labor's schemes.

The Committee's "Election Day Preview" (see attachment 28) was designed to provide reporters and editors with a wealth of hard facts they could use, as well as the Committee's perspective on the 1992 election.

The mailing spurred radio and newspaper interviews before, on and after Election Day (see attachments 29-36).

Even before Election Day, the news media had begun to pay attention to Right to Work and how Bill Clinton and Congress would conspire to destroy it. On October 29, ABC's Sam Donaldson grilled Governor Clinton on repeal of Taft-Hartley Section 14(b). (See attachment 37.)

The Election Day results bore out the Committee's warnings about Big Labor's political clout, enhancing the credibility of the Committee's warnings from now on against Organized Labor's legislative assaults on worker freedom.

Now, after the election, we can expect much more public awareness of and concern about Big Labor's drive to destroy Right to Work.

5) Raising the profile of the National Right to Work Committee

An ongoing mission of the Committee's Public Affairs department is to encourage news articles that help substantiate the Committee's overall message.

When Insight Magazine does a cover story documenting the power and coercive agenda of government employee and teacher union barons, and how they were pulling the strings in the Clinton campaign, and will be doing so in his Administration, it confirms what the Committee is saying both to its members and to the media.

Another fruit of this ongoing effort was a profile of Reed Larson in the National Journal (see attachment 38). While the National Journal has a small subscription, it is widely read by journalists, opinion leaders, politicians and political activists.

When the National Journal calls Reed Larson (and by other implication, the Committee) the "Archenemy of Organized Labor," it helps put us on the map in the minds of reporters, editors and broadcasters.

6) NEA Information Project.

This is another ongoing project. The latest installment in this effort included not only the Insight cover story and Education Week described above, but also in the Committee's monthly Newsletter (see attachments 39-42).

7) All the above has one very important ancillary benefit -- it spurs reporters, news and editorial editors and broadcasters to ask the Committee to provide comment, information or a spokesman for stories and broadcasts they're preparing.

Perry White of Metropolis' Daily Planet may not use the "Election Day Preview" we sent him in October; but when Lois Lane or Clark Kent are asked to do a story with a union angle, who do they call for comment?

Frequently they call the National Right to Work Committee. Some of those calls result in news articles, editorials, interviews and even debates (see attachments 43-46).

To the Editor:

I just read your Nov. 30, 1992 article and wanted to share a few thoughts.

You're right about the Strike bill being an early battle and it "will be close.

But I can assure you, before Congress enacts the Strike bill at Big Labor's behest, they'll have to do it over the massive opposition of members of the National Right to Work Committee.

Committee members signed over 600,000 petitions to Congress in 1991 and 1992 opposing Ted Kennedy's Pushbutton Strike bill. Their protests persuaded normally pro-Big Labor Senators like David Pryor and Dale Bumpers to oppose this bill.

And you can be sure, members of the National Right to Work Committee won't just stand by and watch the Strike bill become law. They'll fight and their role will be decisive.

As you continue to report on the battle over the Pushbutton Strike bill, I hope you'll mention the views and concerns of the 1.7 million members of the National Right to Work Committee.

The National Right to Work Committee is a coalition of employees, employers, retirees, farmers, consumers and taxpayers. We are united by one principle. No worker should ever have to pay tribute to union officials in order to feed UfÜÜ his family. Our views aren't necessarily represented when you interview trade groups and union officials.

*In Louisiana politics there was an open primary of all parties on Oct 3 in which if you got over 50% of the vote you were elected. ~There would be no need for a Nov. 3 election. If no one got a majority, a run off between the top two vote getters (regardless of their party affiliation) would take place on Nov. 3. So... the elections for Senate, Dists. 1,2,3 and 7 of the House have~already been decided. There will be run~offs in Districts 4,5, and~6 on Nov. 3. The information above was given to me by the LA Dept.~of Elections. Though officially unofficial, she said it was~correct.

Clinton wins

2004-03-24 15:22:40

55-2-10-22
This is Reed Larson. Thank you for taking my call.

I'm calling you today because America faces an emergency.

With Bill Clinton as President, you and I now face hand-to-hand combat in Congress to stop Big Labor from wrecking the country with a whole slew of union boss laws.

Unless you and I act at once, in the first 100 days of the Clinton Administration, Big Labor will easily ram bills into law like Ted Kennedy's Strike bill.

As you know, Ted Kennedy's Pushbutton Strike bill would give union czars the power to punish or even FIRE workers who refuse to go on strike.

We barely stopped this job-killing strike bill earlier this year. And NOW we face a new President and a new Congress that's even more eager to give Big Labor everything it wants.

And if Organized Labor enacts the Pushbutton Strike bill, they will go for the big prize next: Erasing every single Right to Work law in the country by repealing Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act -- and Bill Clinton has already promised the AFL-CIO he'll do it.

But as bad as the situation is, its NOT hopeless.

While Big Labor succeeded in installing union militants in the U.S. Senate, they failed to get a total lock.

We're outnumbered. But we're still within striking distance of the votes we need to derail Big Labor in the Senate.

You and I CAN stop them -- if we unite together RIGHT NOW.

That's why I need your immediate support.

By phone, by mail, by every means we can, you and I must mobilize the 75% of Americans who support Right to Work.

As part of that campaign I am asking you to sign a special petition, which I'll present to your Senators and President Clinton, putting them on notice that we won't let them sell out America to the union elite.

I'll need more than your petition. Because the Committee's bank accounts are empty, I really need your generous financial support right away.

Will you pledge $XXX to help me generate a deafening roar of citizen opposition to Organized Labor's legislative agenda?

I'm ready to act as soon as I have your $XXX.

In a moment, my assistant will come on the line. I hope you'll be able to pledge $XXX -- and sign the petition to the Senate and President Clinton.

Within the next few weeks Right to Work faces its most dangerous threat in 16 years. Please help fight back now, while there's still hope.

hope I can help you with.

I'd like to provide you an Election Night interview with a kind expenditures -- are having and will have

on this year's election;

Plus, I'd like to provide you with a free, complete report

What will a big win for Gov. Clinton and his party on Nov. 3 mean for America? That's the story I hope I can help you with.

I'd like to provide you an Election Night interview with a National Right to Work Committee spokesman who will discuss the impact the impending Democratic victories will have in Washington next year. Just call me at 800-325-7892.

In the same vein, I am enclosing several items:

*** The Committee's Special Soft Money News Briefing containing an analysis of the impact that so-called "soft" money -- union machine-funded phone banks, "get-out-the-vote" voter registration drives, and other hidden, in-kind expenditures -- are having and will have on this year's election;

Plus, I'd like to provide you with a free, complete report on how much money Organized Labor has given to every federal candidate this year.

(The fact-filled report was too thick to enclose with this letter. To get your free copy, just return the enclosed reply or better yet call me at 800-325-7892).

Memorandum

September 22, 1992

To: Reed Larson
From: Stephen Goodrick
RE: October Housefile Mailing

I've enclosed the attached letter which you could send to the Committee's 60,000 or so most active members. It is ready to produce and mail if you like.

It may do well, and it will improve our cash flow -- but it probably won't increase our net at the end of the year. I expect that the money raised will be offset by a consequent dip in subsequent mail revenue.

Overall, I would recommend "staying the course" with our current mail schedule. But if you really like the concept and/or copy, or want to jumpstart our cashflow, we can certainly mail this or a similar package.

Please let me know your thoughts as soon as possible.

Dear Mr. Armstrong:

I enjoyed your comments and observations at Tuesday's RTNDA event.

I thought you might like a copy of the National Right to Work Committee's December NEWSLETTER. Hot off the presses!

I especially want to draw your attention to a couple items in our NEWSLETTER, which I've highlighted.

Two quick points:

1. The recent election results demonstrate that the reports of Big Labor's political death are "greatly exaggerated" (apologies to Mark Twain).

Bill Clinton may not be in line with top union officials on the free trade pact ©© but he's 100% with them on their core issue: preserving and extending their forced dues powers.

And in 1993, the fight over Ted Kennedy's Strike bill will be a titanic clash ©© as Bill Clinton and most in Congress attempt to repay what they owe the union machine, and Right to Work members try to stop them.

2. Committee members' activism played a key role in stalling the Strike bill in 1992, and will be crucial in 1993.

Right to Work members signed nearly 600,000 petitions to Congress opposing the Strike bill. They persuaded Senators Dale Bumpers, David Pryor and Fritz Hollings to oppose the Strike bill. Right to Work members' will have to re-double their efforts to stop the Pushbutton Strike bill in 1993.

ÜjÜ One more item. Throughout 1992, the Committee tracked the flow of union PAC contributions to candidates for Congress, as well as the unreported "soft" money support, which far outpaces the reported spending by as much as 10 to 1. That flood of cash and in-kind spending is what put a lopsided union boss-backed majority in the House, and put Big Labor within a few votes of total control in the Senate.

Just consider the value of "loaning" paid union staff members for full-time campaign work @@ which most top union officials routinely do in election years. That alone is worth many times the amounts the union PACs give.

I'd be happy to share with you the fruits of this research. Of course, we're still collecting final data for 1992, but I'll be glad to give you what I have.

Please call me if I can provide more information or answer any questions about Ted Kennedy's Pushbutton Strike bill and the National Right to Work Committee's plans for 1993.

RE: The Bill Clinton ticket and the Right to Work -- Election Day Preview

Election Day 1992 may turn out to be a clean sweep for Arkansas Governor Bill Clinton and Democratic candidates for the U.S. House and Senate.

What will a big win for Gov. Clinton and his party on Nov. 3 mean for America? That's the story I hope I can help you with.

I'd like to provide you an Election Night interview with a National Right to Work Committee spokesman who will discuss the impact the impending Democratic victories will have in Washington next year. Just call me at 800-325-7892.

In the same vein, I am enclosing several items:

*** The National Right to Work Committee's
Preview of the '92 Elections, a brief
snapshot of the Senate races, who is favored
to win and why;

*** The Committee's Special Soft Money News
Briefing containing an analysis of the impact that so-called "soft" money -- union machine-funded phone banks, "get-out-the-vote" voter registration drives, and other hidden, in-kind expenditures -- are having and will have
on this year's election;

Plus, I'd like to provide you with a free, complete report on how much money Organized Labor has given to every federal candidate this year.

(The fact-filled report was too thick to enclose with this letter. To get your free copy, just return the enclosed reply or better yet call me at 800-325-7892).

*Here's some material you might find useful for Election coverage.
Call me if I can answer questions & if I can set up an interview
w/ you*

In your election coverage, I hope you'll ask one important question:

What explains this historic turnaround for the Democratic Party?

There are several reasons, but a big one is the massive financial support Big Labor's political machine gave its candidates.

For example, did you know that in the 1992 election cycle, the union machine is funnelling into political campaigns a record $440 million in both direct contributions and soft money?

That's something the enclosed Soft Money News Briefing lays out in detail -- and I have a lot more material I can give you.

Give me a call at 800-325-7892. I'll send out the complete report as soon as I hear from you.

As I mentioned, I or another spokesman for the National Right to Work Committee can discuss what laws will pass or fail in Congress as a result of these elections. Where will the battle lines be drawn on compulsory unionism next year?

Election Day 1992 is almost here. I'd like to help you make your Election Day reporting as complete as you can. So take a look at the Election '92 materials I've enclosed. Call me for the FREE Special Report, and, if you like, an interview with a Committee representative.

Summary:

Will Organized Labor buy Bill Clinton the Presidency and finance a Democratic landslide in the House and Senate?

On Election Night a National Right to Work Committee spokesman can provide expert commentary on the election results, what happened and why, and what those results will mean for the working people of America.

We speak for the independent workers. Call me at 800-325-7892 -- I'll be happy to arrange an interview.

Plus, I'd like to send you the free report of how much money union PAC's have given federal candidates in 1992.

1992 ELECTION PREVIEW

A National Right to Work Committee Election Snapshot

Overview. A spate of retirements and primary defeats have created a golden opportunity for Big Labor to add to its political power in the U.S. Senate. Candidates bankrolled by the union money machine may ride the Clinton tidal wave to victory in November.

When the last returns are in on Election Night, the Democrats may end up controlling 60 -- and perhaps more -- U.S. Senate seats. Enough to cut off a filibuster and approaching the majority needed to override a presidential veto.

That means pro-Right to Work forces in the Senate will face a difficult battle derailing any of Bill Clinton's expected union-label legislation.

Where Big Labor-backed Candidates are Favored:

California. Rep. Barbara Boxer, financed with $178,100 from the union-boss political machine, is facing a strong challenge from T.V. commentator Bruce Herschenson. This race will be close, but if Boxer pulls it off, it will be Organized Labor that pulls her through.

Colorado. To replace the retiring Timothy Wirth, Coloradans have the choice between pro-Right to Work Terry Considine, and forced-unionism advocate Rep. Ben Nighthorse Campbell. Heavy backing from Organized Labor has given Campbell the lead in this race.

Illinois. Scandals may deny Carol Moseley Braun this seat, but support from Illinois' huge AFL-CIO and teachers union political apparatus give her a strong edge in the polls.

Likely Big Labor Pick-ups:

Idaho. In Right to Work Idaho, Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne's embrace of Right to Work should give him the edge over Rep. Richard Stallings, who has a legislative paper trail indicting him as a Big Labor tool. But this is a seat the Democrats and their Big Labor patrons feel they can take, so look for heavy contributions from the union political machine.

New Hampshire. In the race to succeed pro-Right to Work Warren Rudman, Judd Gregg has a narrow edge over John Rauh. Rauh has the support of the AFL-CIO, while Gregg's past hostility to Right to Work has drawn heavy voter protests in this pro-freedom state. Too close to call.

Utah. Robert Bennett's forthright endorsement of Right to Work may enable him to overcome a nationwide Big Labor landslide. Rep. Wayne Owens' support for forced unionism is unpopular in this Right to Work state.

Wisconsin. Bob Kasten is trailing in the polls, behind "Paul Wellstone Democrat" Russ Feingold. Kasten hasn't enunciated 100% support for Right to Work, while Feingold has rallied his coalition. Kasten appears to be in deep trouble.

Possible Upsets:

Ohio. John Glenn definitely has the Right Stuff as far as the union bosses are concerned. The union bosses are going all out to protect the sponsor of the postal union bosses' bill to repeal the federal Hatch Act. Challenger Michael DeWine is waging a strong, skillful campaign, but has refused to support Right to Work. Too close to call.

North Carolina. Senator Terry Sanford is supposedly very vulnerable this year. Big Labor is trying its best to keep him in the Senate, and their money, both direct and in the form of soft contributions, might be enough to make the difference in the race. But this Right to Work state may yet reject this advocate of forced unionism in favor of Lauch Faircloth, a strong supporter of voluntary unionism.

South Carolina. The junior Senator from Right to Work South Carolina, Fritz Hollings, has begun voting with, and taking money from, Organized Labor interests. And now he's facing a stiffer than expected re-election fight. If Hollings retains the seat, it will be because of the anti-Bush vote and Big Labor backing.

Alaska. Frank Murkowski is facing a surprisingly strong challenge this year. Murkowski normally votes to protect the Right to Work, but during the campaign has distanced himself from the issue. Challenger Tony Smith enjoys enthusiastic backing and tens of thousands in forced dues from union elites.

BIG LABOR "SOFT MONEY"
The Invisible Hand in American Politics

If Bill Clinton and the Democratic candidates for the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives win big on November 3, 1992, a major reason will be the massive, in-kind "soft money" Organized Labor is spending on behalf of their hand-picked candidates.

While union PACs this year are expected to invest between $35-40 million on federal candidates who will support Big Labor's agenda, union officials will spend a vastly larger sum in so-called "soft money."*

In 1976, Victor Riesel, the noted labor columnist and expert, estimated that the amount of "in-kind" union political spending, "soft money," was $100 million, ten times the reported, on-the-record, $10 million given to federal candidates that year.

Just how is "soft money" spent to buy elections?

These covert expenditures pay the salaries of union staff members who serve as full-time "volunteers" on selected campaigns. They also pay for phone banks, "get-out-the-vote" voter registration drives, door-to-door campaigning, and many other activities manned by paid and unpaid "volunteers."

Estimating 10 dollars in "soft money" for every dollar in reported union contributions, Big Labor will probably spend between $350 and $400 million this year to secure a president and Congress to its liking. If anything, this is an extremely conservative estimate, especially when you consider the following:

Organized Labor's huge staff -- on loan till Election Day

According to union payroll forms for the reporting year 1987, labor unions spend $2.4 billion per year on union salaries and benefits. This is equal to $9.1 million per working day.

But if only one-third of these staff members ($3.1 million) spent just 90 days working for candidates during an election cycle, that represents an in-kind "soft money" expenditure of $270 million for manpower costs alone. The actual amount is likely to be significantly greater.

Union treasuries provide seed money

According to the Los Angeles Times, Nov. 12, 1991, "Labor put up seed money to start Wofford's campaign for the Senate."

* Most of this is illegally spent in violation of the U.S. Supreme Court's Beck decision. The federal government has taken almost no steps to stop them.

On Sept. 25, 1990, The Wall Street Journal reported that "Some 45 unions, including auto, steel, and communications workers, teachers and letter carriers, contributed over half of $5 million raised for the Democrats' five-year 'Project 500'..."

Turning out volunteers -- paid and unpaid

"The steelworkers put 52 union people to work full time for [Wofford], and they were joined by activists from other unions."
-- Los Angeles Times, Nov. 12, 1991, Harry Bernstein column.

"...[M]any of the members of the AFL-CIO Executive Council and other top union officers will be out at jobsites to lead the effort. Council members involved in the election campaign have been asked by AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland to take a direct role in 'battleground states' where they have substantial membership." -- Dubuque Leader, Nov. 4, 1988.

Labor management experts know that organizing strikes and negotiations crawls to a halt during the fall of each election year, because union "organizers" are out "volunteering" full time.

A nationwide phone network -- Value? Priceless!

"As of October 1, no less than 60 International staff and council staff members were assigned to work full-time in 56 campaigns for U.S. Representatives. [114] AFSCME phone banks, an aggregate of 1,500 phones, were generating more than one million calls per week." -- Public Employee, June 1984.

"The unions in the A.F.L.-C.I.O. have mounted an impressive state effort in Alabama. With 16 phone banks across the state, the unions have 107 paid workers making thousands of calls to identify Mr. Mondale's labor supporters and turn them out at the polls." -- The New York Times, March 9, 1984.

Murray Seegar, the AFL-CIO's information director said in the National Journal, March 15, 1986, that the "'Labor federation has no estimate of its own [soft money contributions]...'

"'If you have a telephone bank, all done by volunteers, say, 25 people calling for four hours, how much is it worth?

"'Is it the minimum wage, is it what they would be earning if they were stringing electrical cable somewhere...? There is no way to value it.'"

There is no question that "soft money" represents an enormous financial contribution to any campaign, which can yield enormous dividends on election night. Union-boss "volunteers," phone banks, door-to-door campaigning and other "soft money" contributions usually provide the margin of victory in a competitive race.

Shalt Thou Labor?

The Book says that we'll eat bread in the sweat of our brow, and for most of us, it's true.

Work is both a punishment and a reward. One aspect of it is a curse, for we are "weak and heavy laden." In another way, it's a blessing. Most normal humans find their greatest satisfaction in their work, whether it's a "job," a "calling," a "profession," or a hobby or community service.

Labor Day has been appropriated by the leaders of a minority of Americans as an occasion for praising the accomplishments of unions; and some of their achievements are indeed worthy.

But too many of the union professionals have appropriated the credit that should go to what William Graham Sumner called "The Forgotten Man." That would be the man—or woman—who saves, obeys the law, cares for a family, and as Sumner put it, "prays and pays, but mostly he pays."

Reed Larson of the National Right to Work Committee reminds us that Labor Day should not be perverted into Labor Boss Day. This would honor the thuggism that spreads the evil of compulsory unionism "like a cancer—infesting our economy, corrupting our politics, weakening our individual freedom."

And we ain't seen nothin' yet. If the November election goes as expected, the union bosses will have a headlock on the Congress and the White House.

Reliable public opinion polls show that three-quarters of all Americans support the concept of Right to Work. Yet, partly out of ignorance and partly because of the Republican Party's collapse, they are about to elect an administration and a Congress that will impose on the land a "push-button strike bill; repeal the Hatch Act, giving unions a total lock on the ever growing federal bureaucracy; and repeal the Right to Work laws now in effect in 21 states.

It is in these states that most of America's economic growth has occurred. This growth, and America's international competitiveness, will be aborted by a union dominated government; and we shall join the Third World of socialist repression, common misery and special privilege only for crooks and political bosses and union goons, who when you think of it, come under the same classification—crooks.

BIG LABOR "SOFT MONEY"
The Invisible Hand in American Politics

If Bill Clinton and the Democratic candidates for the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives win big on November 3, 1992, a major reason will be the massive, in-kind "soft money" Organized Labor is spending on behalf of their hand-picked candidates.

While union PACs this year are expected to invest between $35-40 million on federal candidates who will support Big Labor's agenda, union officials will spend a vastly larger sum in so-called "soft money."*

In 1976, Victor Riesel, the noted labor columnist and expert, estimated that the amount of "in-kind" union political spending, "soft money," was $100 million, ten times the reported, on-the-record, $10 million given to federal candidates that year.

Just how is "soft money" spent to buy elections?

These covert expenditures pay the salaries of union staff members who serve as full-time "volunteers" on selected campaigns. They also pay for phone banks, "get-out-the-vote" voter registration drives, door-to-door campaigning, and many other activities manned by paid and unpaid "volunteers."

Estimating 10 dollars in "soft money" for every dollar in reported union contributions, Big Labor will probably spend between $350 and $400 million this year to secure a president and Congress to its liking. If anything, this is an extremely conservative estimate, especially when you consider the following:

Organized Labor's huge staff -- on loan till Election Day

According to union payroll forms for the reporting year 1987, labor unions spend $2.4 billion per year on union salaries and benefits. This is equal to $9.1 million per working day.

But if only one-third of these staff members ($3.1 million) spent just 90 days working for candidates during an election cycle, that represents an in-kind "soft money" expenditure of $270 million for manpower costs alone. The actual amount is likely to be significantly greater.

Union treasuries provide seed money

According to the Los Angeles Times, Nov. 12, 1991, "Labor put up seed money to start Wofford's campaign for the Senate."

* Most of this is illegally spent in violation of the U.S. Supreme Court's Beck decision. The federal government has taken almost no steps to stop them.

On Sept. 25, 1990, The Wall Street Journal reported that "Some 45 unions, including auto, steel, and communications workers, teachers and letter carriers, contributed over half of $5 million raised for the Democrats' five-year 'Project 500'..."

Turning out volunteers -- paid and unpaid

"The steelworkers put 52 union people to work full time for [Wofford], and they were joined by activists from other unions."
-- Los Angeles Times, Nov. 12, 1991, Harry Bernstein column.

"...[M]any of the members of the AFL-CIO Executive Council and other top union officers will be out at jobsites to lead the effort. Council members involved in the election campaign have been asked by AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland to take a direct role in 'battleground states' where they have substantial membership." -- Dubuque Leader, Nov. 4, 1988.

Labor management experts know that organizing strikes and negotiations crawls to a halt during the fall of each election year, because union "organizers" are out "volunteering" full time.

A nationwide phone network -- Value? Priceless!

"As of October 1, no less than 60 International staff and council staff members were assigned to work full-time in 56 campaigns for U.S. Representatives. [114] AFSCME phone banks, an aggregate of 1,500 phones, were generating more than one million calls per week." -- Public Employee, June 1984.

"The unions in the A.F.L.-C.I.O. have mounted an impressive state effort in Alabama. With 16 phone banks across the state, the unions have 107 paid workers making thousands of calls to identify Mr. Mondale's labor supporters and turn them out at the polls." -- The New York Times, March 9, 1984.

Murray Seegar, the AFL-CIO's information director said in the National Journal, March 15, 1986, that the "'Labor federation has no estimate of its own [soft money contributions]...'

"'If you have a telephone bank, all done by volunteers, say, 25 people calling for four hours, how much is it worth?

"'Is it the minimum wage, is it what they would be earning if they were stringing electrical cable somewhere...? There is no way to value it.'"

There is no question that "soft money" represents an enormous financial contribution to any campaign, which can yield enormous dividends on election night. Union-boss "volunteers," phone banks, door-to-door campaigning and other "soft money" contributions usually provide the margin of victory in a competitive race.

1992 ELECTION PREVIEW

A National Right to Work Committee Election Snapshot

Overview. A spate of retirements and primary defeats have created a golden opportunity for Big Labor to add to its political power in the U.S. Senate. Candidates bankrolled by the union money machine may ride the Clinton tidal wave to victory in November.

When the last returns are in on Election Night, the Democrats may end up controlling 60 -- and perhaps more -- U.S. Senate seats. Enough to cut off a filibuster and approaching the majority needed to override a presidential veto.

That means pro-Right to Work forces in the Senate will face a difficult battle derailing any of Bill Clinton's expected union-label legislation.

Where Big Labor-backed Candidates are Favored:

California. Rep. Barbara Boxer, financed with $178,100 from the union-boss political machine, is facing a strong challenge from T.V. commentator Bruce Herschenson. This race will be close, but if Boxer pulls it off, it will be Organized Labor that pulls her through.

Colorado. To replace the retiring Timothy Wirth, Coloradans have the choice between pro-Right to Work Terry Considine, and forced-unionism advocate Rep. Ben Nighthorse Campbell. Heavy backing from Organized Labor has given Campbell the lead in this race.

Illinois. Scandals may deny Carol Moseley Braun this seat, but support from Illinois' huge AFL-CIO and teachers union political apparatus give her a strong edge in the polls.

Likely Big Labor Pick-ups:

Idaho. In Right to Work Idaho, Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne's embrace of Right to Work should give him the edge over Rep. Richard Stallings, who has a legislative paper trail indicting him as a Big Labor tool. But this is a seat the Democrats and their Big Labor patrons feel they can take, so look for heavy contributions from the union political machine.

New Hampshire. In the race to succeed pro-Right to Work Warren Rudman, Judd Gregg has a narrow edge over John Rauh. Rauh has the support of the AFL-CIO, while Gregg's past hostility to Right to Work has drawn heavy voter protests in this pro-freedom state. Too close to call.

Utah. Robert Bennett's forthright endorsement of Right to Work may enable him to overcome a nationwide Big Labor landslide. Rep. Wayne Owens' support for forced unionism is unpopular in this Right to Work state.

Wisconsin. Bob Kasten is trailing in the polls, behind "Paul Wellstone Democrat" Russ Feingold. Kasten hasn't enunciated 100% support for Right to Work, while Feingold has rallied his coalition. Kasten appears to be in deep trouble.

Possible Upsets:

Ohio. John Glenn definitely has the Right Stuff as far as the union bosses are concerned. The union bosses are going all out to protect the sponsor of the postal union bosses' bill to repeal the federal Hatch Act. Challenger Michael DeWine is waging a strong, skillful campaign, but has refused to support Right to Work. Too close to call.

North Carolina. Senator Terry Sanford is supposedly very vulnerable this year. Big Labor is trying its best to keep him in the Senate, and their money, both direct and in the form of soft contributions, might be enough to make the difference in the race. But this Right to Work state may yet reject this advocate of forced unionism in favor of Lauch Faircloth, a strong supporter of voluntary unionism.

South Carolina. The junior Senator from Right to Work South Carolina, Fritz Hollings, has begun voting with, and taking money from, Organized Labor interests. And now he's facing a stiffer than expected re-election fight. If Hollings retains the seat, it will be because of the anti-Bush vote and Big Labor backing.

Alaska. Frank Murkowski is facing a surprisingly strong challenge this year. Murkowski normally votes to protect the Right to Work, but during the campaign has distanced himself from the issue. Challenger Tony Smith enjoys enthusiastic backing and tens of thousands in forced dues from union elites.

Election Day Preview

Election Day 1992 may turn out to be a clean sweep for Arkansas Governor Bill Clinton and U.S. Senate candidate Dale Bumpers.

What will a big win for Gov. Clinton and Sen. Bumpers on Nov. 3 mean for Arkansas citizens and America? That's the story
I hope I can help you with.

I'd like to provide you an Election Night interview with a National Right to Work Committee spokesman who will discuss the impact Clinton and Bumpers victories would have in Washington
next year. Just call me at 800-325-7892.

In the same vein, I am enclosing several items:

*** The National Right to Work Committee's
Preview of the '92 Elections, a brief
snapshot of the Senate races, who is favored
to win and why;

*** The Committee's Special Soft Money News
Briefing containing an analysis of the impact that so-called "soft" money -- union machine-
funded phone banks, "get-out-the-vote" voter registration drives, and other hidden, in-

In your election coverage, I hope you'll ask one important question:

What explains this historic turnaround for the Democratic Party?

There are several reasons, but a big one is the massive financial support Big Labor's political machine gave its candidates.

For example, did you know that in the 1992 election cycle, the union machine is funnelling into political campaigns a record $440 million in both direct contributions and soft money?

That's something the enclosed Soft Money News Briefing lays out in detail -- and I have a lot more material I can give you.

Give me a call at 800-325-7892. I'll send out the complete report as soon as I hear from you.

As I mentioned, I or another spokesman for the National Right to Work Committee can discuss what laws will pass or fail in Congress as a result of these elections. Where will the battle lines be drawn on compulsory unionism next year?

Election Day 1992 is almost here. I'd like to help you make your Election Day reporting as complete as you can. So take a look at the Election '92 materials I've enclosed. Call me for the FREE Special Report, and, if you like, an interview with a Committee representative.

Summary:

Will Organized Labor buy Bill Clinton the Presidency and Dale Bumpers Arkansas's Senate seat?

On Election Night a National Right to Work Committee spokesman can provide expert commentary on the election results, what happened and why, and what those results will mean for the working people of Arkansas.

We speak for the independent workers. Call me at 800-325-7892 -- I'll be happy to arrange an interview.

Plus, I'd like to send you the free report of how much money union PAC's have given federal candidates in 1992.

In your election coverage, I hope you'll ask one important question:

What explains this historic turnaround for the Democratic Party?

There are several reasons, but a big one is the massive financial support Big Labor's political machine gave its candidates.

For example, did you know that in the 1992 election cycle, the union machine is funnelling into political campaigns a record $440 million in both direct contributions and soft money?

That's something the enclosed Soft Money News Briefing lays out in detail -- and I have a lot more material I can give you.

Give me a call at 800-325-7892. I'll send out the complete report as soon as I hear from you.

As I mentioned, I or another spokesman for the National Right to Work Committee can discuss what laws will pass or fail in Congress as a result of these elections. Where will the battle lines be drawn on compulsory unionism next year?

Election Day 1992 is almost here. I'd like to help you make your Election Day reporting as complete as you can. So take a look at the Election '92 materials I've enclosed. Call me for the FREE Special Report, and, if you like, an interview with a Committee representative.

Summary:

Will Organized Labor buy Bill Clinton the Presidency and finance a Democratic landslide in the House and Senate?

On Election Night a National Right to Work Committee spokesman can provide expert commentary on the election results, what happened and why, and what those results will mean for the working people of America.

We speak for the independent workers. Call me at 800-325-7892 -- I'll be happy to arrange an interview.

Plus, I'd like to send you the free report of how much money union PAC's have given federal candidates in 1992.
